

The GrassRoots Association for Student Power

GRASPé

The GrassRoots Association for Student Power / Groupe d'action et de sensibilisation au pouvoir étudiant (GRASPé) is an autonomous, non-hierarchical group of McGill students committed to direct action who organize on a consensus-based model to further radical political and social change both on and off campus.

On campus GRASPé seeks to empower students to take back their university from the sort of callous administrators and bureaucrats who have expelled essential student services, illegally raised international tuition, and repeatedly undermined the tuition freeze. Off campus GRASPé works with wider social movements in an effort to build a more just, free and equal society.

What do we do?

GRASPé has been involved in various actions, campaigns and projects throughout its short history:

- protests against the FTAA;
- strike against the War in Iraq;
- student strike against the cuts in Quebec's loans and bursaries program;
- creation of the Midnight Kitchen, a student-run vegan cafeteria;
- amendment to the student society's constitution that mandates it to hold at least one general assembly per semester;
- campaigns for student space on campus;
- coordination with progressive groups.

How to get involved?

Our next meeting will be held in the Arts Lounge (basement of Leacock) on Tuesday, September 19 at 6 pm.
